Solar panel manufacturers are separated into different tiers. Tier 1 status is typically reserved for the largest manufacturers with automated protection and some degree of vertical integration. Small- to medium-scale manufacturers fall into tiers 2 or 3. Tier 1 solar panels are typically more expensive, but they're not necessarily.

When it comes to solar panels, local zoning regulations may cover aspects such as setbacks, height restrictions and aesthetic considerations. You might have to rethink your solar plan based on local regulations. For example, Bobby in Colorado said their system.

Paying cash for solar panels is great if you can afford it. You don't have to worry about paying interest over time. But that's not an option for everyone. If you're worried about the upfront costs of going solar, you might consider leasing panels or entering a power purchase.

Most manufacturers offer performance and product warranties. A product warranty typically covers defects for around 10 to 12 years, while a performance warranty ensures the panel maintains a specified efficiency for 25 years or more. It's often worth it to pay a little more.
