The financial sustainability of subsidies in Kuwait is being increasingly questioned, mainly because of fluctuating oil and gas prices and concerns about rising domestic energy consumption.

Kuwait has historically relied on substantial energy subsidies as a key element of its socio-economic policies. Direct and indirect financial subsidies and support affect nearly all aspects of life, and they are often interpreted by economists as a form of wealth distribution commonly found in.

To address one of the highest rates of per capita energy consumption globally, the government of Kuwait is taking a multi-pronged approach involving the reduction of subsidies following the rollout of incentives for green energy solutions and national energy efficiency initiatives in 2016-17.
