Ireland's energy transition could be worth up to €19 billion in capital investment per year by 2030—with over 40% of that investment potentially staying in Ireland. For solar, this is a pivotal moment. The report estimates the Irish utility-scale solar PV market will be worth €669 million annually.

In line with the European Union's climate ambitions, Ireland has committed to reducing greenhouse gas emissions by at least 51% by 2030, compared to 2018 levels. Additionally, under the Climate Action Plan 2023, the government aims for 80% of electricity to come from renewable sources by the end of.

In order for Ireland – north and south – to meet its solar targets for 2030, transmission system operators (EirGrid and SONI) must establish new control strategies and invest in new infrastructure to ensure system security, researchers from EirGrid and University College Dublin (UCD) have claimed.

As Ireland embarks on its journey to a sustainable future, solar energy is emerging as a key player in achieving the nation's ambitious 2030 climate goals. Solar energy, once a peripheral player in the national energy mix, is now at the forefront of this transition, driven by ambitious targets.

Ireland's National Energy Projections explores future trends for energy use in Ireland and how we are likely to perform against our national Climate Action Plan and EU climate and energy targets. This report presents the main findings of SEAI's latest National Energy Projections. These are the.
